Community Volunteers in Medicine

(West Chester) Community Volunteers in Medicine (CVIM) is pleased to announce the election of two new board members, Susan N. H. Petrocelli, Paoli and Robert F. Tompkins, Coatesville. Petrocelli has held management level marketing and sales positions with both Eclipsys Corporation and the former Shared Medical Systems. She has served as an active member or board member of numerous local organizations, including Chester County Fund for Women and Girls, Girls Star, The Hickman, The Vassar Club of Philadelphia and Willistown Friends Meeting. Tompkins serves as Vice President of Sales at EchoData in Coatesville where he is responsible for the management of strategic growth initiatives nationwide. Prior to coming to EchoData he served as Vice President of Sales in the eastern U.S. region for Aero Fulfillment Services in Mason, OH.

Community Volunteers in Medicine (CVIM), located in West Chester, is a community and volunteer based health care facility founded in 1998 to provide free primary medical and dental services to uninsured individuals and families who live or work in Chester County – the working poor. As many as 45,000 Chester County residents meet the criteria and many receive vital services at CVIM from a small core staff and more than 200 volunteer physicians, dentists, nurses, social workers, pharmacists, health educators, dieticians and other medical professionals as well as non-clinical support staff. For more information about CVIM please visit our website at www.cvim.org.
