Community Volunteers in Medicine

(West Chester) Community Volunteers in Medicine (CVIM) is pleased to announce the election of two new board members, Diego Calderin, West Chester and Marion R. Murphy, MSW, Malvern. Calderin, co-founder of IT solutions provider Anexinet in 2000, has served as the company's president and CEO since 2003, during which time Anexinet experienced exceptional growth and recognition with several prestigious industry and regional awards. In 2005, he was named Ernst & Young Entrepreneur of the Year® in the Emerging Business category for the Greater Philadelphia and Central Pennsylvania region.

Calderin is an active member of the Society for Information Management (SIM); chairperson of the Integrated Science, Business and Technology (ISBT) Advisory Board at La Salle University; a translator for the Visiting Nurses Association of Chester County; a Cornerstone Sponsor for the Philadelphia Children's Theater; and Premier Sponsor for the Guadenzia Community.

Murphy is a graduate of Fisk University, Nashville, TN and completed graduated study in Social Work at the University of Pennsylvania. She worked for many years in various areas of social work including child welfare, medical social work and mental health clinics. She currently volunteers with the Kidney Foundation and as a member of the Secondary Education Committee at the University of Pennsylvania and Valley Forge Audubon Society.

Community Volunteers in Medicine (CVIM), located in West Chester, is a community and volunteer based health care facility founded in 1998 to provide free primary medical and dental services to uninsured individuals and families who live or work in Chester County – the working poor. As many as 45,000 Chester County residents meet the criteria and many receive vital services at CVIM from a small core staff and more than 200 volunteer physicians, dentists, nurses, social workers, pharmacists, health educators, dieticians and other medical professionals as well as non-clinical support staff.
